Subject's extra information

Attend all classroom, theoretical and practical sessions.

The course introduces students to the concept and functions of comparative law as a tool for understanding the multiplicity of the world's legal systems and the distinctive elements that allow grouping national systems into legal families. It provides an overview of different forms, institutions and procedures that can be used in laws to regulate society. The different branches of our legal system provide information about its relationship with a certain legal family. The education that the students will receive will give them a very useful overview for understanding legal problems and the different responses and methods that law offers for solving them.
